

It's time for the FCC to stop allowing businesses to control the lives of the individual. It is the right of every individual who pays to have telephone service in their home to decide if they wish to receive telemarketing calls..or not. It is NOT the right of the FCC..or ANY business to make that decision for them. The "Telephone Consumer Protection Act" should continue to protect the rights of the consumer. Otherwise, just call it as you wish it to be...and rename it to "Ignore The Right Of The Consumer In Favor Of the Telemarketing Profession", because ignoring the clear choice of the consumer means only one thing...that this "act" is just another in a long line of legislation that ultimately becomes superfluous through government sanctioned manipulation by yet another deep pocket special interest group.

Unconscionable!
